BRINGING UP FATHER

Winans' Horse Mourns His Death

London.—The "Bik" favorite trotting mare of Walter Winans, the American sportsman who died here recently, is said by Winans' stable men to have grieved so much since her master's death that she became almost unmanageable.

"Mr. Winans always used to visit her first and feed her with sugar and talk to her, and she was always the first to be harnessed for a run around the track," said W. Mills, who had been the dead man's groom for 29 years.

"Mr. Winans bred the mare himself," Mills continued. "On the day of his death I think the mare must have seen her master carried in after an accident. That afternoon the men could do nothing with her. She refused food and kept kicking at the door of her box. The next day when I took her out for exercise, she neighed the whole time. Finally we had to shut her up for a day or two in the dark, and now she has become a little quieter."

Walter Winans was a relative of Mrs. Charles Gage, 92 Court street, Janesville.

Over 70,000 After That One Buck

The largest number of hunters ever to obtain licenses in Wisconsin inaugurated the deer hunting season in northern counties. W. E. Burrier, conservation commissioner, announced that over 70,000 licenses had been issued for the open season on deer, which extends to November 30 and that he expects perhaps a thousand more applications for licenses before the period ends. Last season 68,000 licenses were given.

Some hunters have not waited for the season to open and have been hunting deer for the past week; according to reports of game wardens, who have arrested more than a dozen for this illegal shooting. Fall of snow in most of the northern counties, rendering easy the tracking of deer, is responsible for such violations of the game laws.

Deer hunting is permitted in all of the northern counties of the state except Marathon. The season's bag is limited to one. Hunting is prohibited during the period from one hour after sunset to one hour before sunrise. It is illegal to shoot in the water or on the ice of any body of water. Dogs and artificial light may not be used nor may bait be packed for the purpose of enticing deer to a spot.

"WAXIE"—WE'LL BITE, IT'S A BUSHY YARN

Waxahachie, Tex., getting on the map again as a big league training camp, brings a story that Pat Monahan says he turned up while scouting in a small league in the middle west.

According to Pat the manager of the ball club used "word signs." When he wanted a certain play put on he used a keyboard to notify his players. The key word for putting on a hit and run, with a man on first, was the name of any town west of the Mississippi river.

A runner got on first, the batter came up and the manager, prancing on the coaching line, let out this yell: "What's the boy on your team, every body, people—Waxahachie!"

The batter, who was posed for whatever might come up, gripped his bat, hesitated, then turned to the box and yelled what the manager:

"Waxie—what? Where the hell's that town, anyway?"

Just then the pitcher slipped one straight over and the runner was caught flat-footed off first.

The batter was fined $5 that night for not knowing his geography.

TRY TO ESTABLISH GERMAN CREDIT

Proposed to Use German Alien Property As Basis for Opening Trade.

By DAVID LAWRENCE.
(Copyright 1920, Janesville Daily Gazette.)

Washington, Nov. 24.—Leading bankers have asked President-elect Harding for a conference as soon as he returns from Danaua, so that his views may be obtained on the formation of a banking syndicate whereby $400,000,000 of German capital and securities now held by the alien property custodian shall become available as a basis of credit in international trade.

The plan to utilize the German securities is also before the Wilson administration, which is studying the legal points involved. But the undertaking is so far reaching in importance and has such a wide range of international exchange that New York bankers are eager to know how Senator Harding looks at the matter so that there will be no hitch in the plan before it is made before March 4.

German Property Here

The securities were originally held by German residents in the United States or American corporations and business houses in which the majority of the stock was German owned. Those securities have been held in trust during the war, and along with other German property their disposition has been left to Congress. President Wilson has declined to relinquish the return of the property until America signed a peace treaty with Germany and said that the chief arguments against the Knox resolution for a separate peace was that it did not bind Germany and that only by a separate agreement or treaty with Germany could an understanding be reached concerning such questions as German property in the United States, or claims growing out of the sinking of the Lusitania.

But the depression in export trade and the general condition of American business which depend very largely for their existence on their ability to sell goods overseas is a part of the present predicament to establish a new basis of credit. Foreign trade has been adversely affected not because of a surplus of goods abroad or because of the absence of money or credit wherewith to pay for American goods. The movement to create a credit for German purchases is believed by its authors to be the best way to start the ball rolling toward better conditions in the exchange market generally.

Considerable pressure is being brought to bear upon the Wilson administration to approve the plan in respect to the ultimate fate of the peace treaty may be. Mr. Wilson's determination during the last session of Congress was to insist upon the ratification of the treaty before taking up all other questions with Germany growing out of the war.

To Help Trade

Some of those who favor the building of an American syndicate believe the German securities could be invested legally by the United States government in such a corporation as is permitted by the Edge law and that the right still exists to invest the German securities with the American government—the trustee—sees fit. Others think a wiser plan would be to obtain the permission of the German owners of the securities. It is believed that this permission is already assured because by such a scheme Germany would be able to buy at once needed commodities. Just what England and France might say about the establishment of such a credit in favor of Germany, which tend to give German raw materials that France for example may be anxious to get but is unable to do so without similar credit arrangements, is hard to say. The American government, however, is free to discriminate in favor of Germany or to establish trade relations in any way that may seem desirable at the moment. Since the defeat of the peace treaty the association with the allied governments has suffered more or less and the tendency among exporters has been to get trade wherever possible without thought of war hatred. The expected collapse in trade relations to a point of which the agitation against the purchase of German toys, has not developed, and England and France are trading with Germany. American exports have been handicapped in a resumption of trade by the defeat of the peace treaty, but the movement of the New York bankers to establish a basis of credit for German purchases is believed to be the first step toward a general renewal of trade relations with Germany.

into German Credit

It is estimated that if the $400,000,000 of securities owned by the Germans and held in present by the alien property custodian are invested in the new syndicate, a basis of credit amounting to approximately two billion dollars may be established. Germany would be enabled to buy goods with that credit, and the hope of the organizers of the syndicate is that large quantities of American goods may as a consequence promptly find market in central Europe.

Although Senator Harding has not yet replied to the request for a conference, his close friends represent him as ready to discuss the whole situation carefully and to give such assurances as may be possible under the circumstances to forward the plan for a betterment of trade relations with Europe.

ENOUGH COAL HERE TO LAST WINTER

Householders of this city will be kept supplied with all the coal they need this winter according to indications contained in early replies to a questionnaire of the Chamber of Commerce to the coal dealers. Statements are made by the coal men that they have eight days' supply on order. Estimate of the amount of coal used here by factory, store, business buildings and homes during the ordinary winter place the amount at 75,000 tons.

Considerable pressure is being brought to bear upon the Wilson administration to approve the plan in respect to the ultimate fate of the peace treaty may be. Mr. Wilson's determination during the last session of Congress was to insist upon the ratification of the treaty before taking up all other questions with Germany growing out of the war.

Thanksgiving

To give thanks in earnest is a beautiful thing to do. But to give it, and in return we do nothing for which to be thankful, is the highest form of hypocrisy. That is something which we strive always to avoid. Sometimes there are occasions when one's patience is worn to a thread. But it is things of this sort which makes for betterment and for our part, we are glad of it.

For since last Thanksgiving Day, there have been many obstacles to surmount. Good merchandise has been scarce. Prices have been high. Besides other things which have tested the mettle of every merchant.

Notwithstanding these things, our business has grown; the confidence the public has in this store and its personnel has increased. For these and other things we are very thankful.
